

Biographical Sketch
Stanley Graven, MD

EDUCATION

1956 MD, State University of Iowa
1956-60 Internship and Residency
1964-66 Post-doctorate Fellow, Institute for Enzyme Research, University of Wisconsin

PROFESSIONAL EXPERIENCE

1966-76 Division of Neonatology, Dept. of Pediatrics,
University of Wisconsin
1976-80 Professor, Neonatology, Dept. of Pediatrics, University of South Dakota Medical Director,
Maternal Child Health, South Dakota Dept. of Health
1980-84 Professor of Pediatrics in Neonatology, Director, Infant Development Nursery, University of Missouri
1984-93 Professor and Chair, Dept. of Community & Family Health, College of Public Health,
University of South Florida
1993-98 Professor and Chair, Dept. of Community & Family Health, College of Public Health,
University of South Florida

SELECT PUBLICATIONS

Graven, S.N., et al., The High Risk Environment, Part I. The Role of the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit and the Outcome of High Risk Infants, 1992 Journal of Perinatology, Vol 12, pp 164-172

Graven, S.N., et al., The High Risk Environment, Part 2. The Role of Caregiving and the Social Environment 1992 Journal of Perinatology, Vol 12, pp 267-275.

The Effects of Sound on Fetus and Newborn Implications for the Neonatal Intensive Care Unit, Study Group Product. S.N. Graven, Program Director.

Department of Community and Family Health • USF College of Public Health
13201 Bruce B. Downs Blvd. • MDC 56 • Tampa, FL 33612
phone 813-974-4867 • fax (813) 974-5172
This page last updated July 8, 2003