SOPHE Opens Ethics Surveys for Practitioners, Faculty

The Society for Public Health Education's (SOPHE) Ethics Committee seeks insight to questions related to ethical health education practice through two online surveys. One survey queries health educators' professional training in ethics, their experience exposure to unethical behavior, their perceptions concerning sanctions for unethical behavior and their interest in increased courses or continuing education in ethics. This survey can be found at <http://www.zoomerang.com/survey.zgi?p=WEB225GGKS6X6C>. A second survey invites one faculty member from each professional preparation program to answer questions pertaining to how ethics is taught to their graduate and/or undergraduate students, the course instructors' preparation in ethics and the perceived need by faculty for more training in this area. This survey can be found at <http://www.zoomerang.com/survey.zgi?p=WEB225GGNO6YXO>. Each survey takes approximately 15-20 minutes, is completely confidential and is open to SOPHE members and non-members alike. From ASPH Friday Letter #1429.
