About Dr. Mandel Sher, MD

Dr. Mandel Sher attended college and medical school at Northwestern; completed a pediatric residency at Duke and Boston Children's Hospital; adolescent medicine fellowship and Chief Residency at Boston Children's; and pediatric rheumatology and allergy/immunology fellowships at University of Michigan. Dr. Sher joined Dr. Robert Good and USF faculty in 1986 and is currently a Clinical Professor of Pediatrics and Medicine. He has served as Interim Division Chief of USF Allergy/Immunology and Co-Director of the USF Allergy/Immunology Fellowship program. Dr. Sher is a Fellow of AAAAI and ACAAI, serving as program faculty and on planning committees. He is active in FAAIS for over 25 years in multiple roles and recently as liaison between FAAIS and USF Allergy/Immunology. Dr. Sher has a clinical and research interest in chronic cough including novel cough drug development.

Dr. Sher and Karen enjoy their three children and spouses and two grandchildren as well as golf, gardening, and opera.

Dr. Sher is an essential part of the Division of Allergy and Immunology, Department of Pediatrics. He is a friend and colleague, and a pleasure to work with.
